Respond & Rebuild is a group of disaster response volunteers who came together to help in the wake of Hurricane Sandy. We use our experience as relief workers and skills in the construction trades to coordinate immediate and effective response to disaster and aid in the long term rebuilding process. We’ve partnered with Occupy Sandy to share skills and resources as well as coordinate, volunteers and residents to multiply our efforts across affected areas.

Why this is urgent
The scope of the damage inflicted by Hurricane Sandy is massive. Recovery and rebuilding will last for months if not years. Our greatest concern is that flooding creates mold, which presents a serious public health concern in the form of respiratory problems and in severe cases, death. Mold removal requires a specific course of action to mitigate what is there and prevent more from growing. Misinformation is common, and many residents do not have accurate information about protecting their health. R & R and Occupy Sandy have been addressing this public health issue since we hit the ground, through pumping, cleaning, gutting, and removing/preventing mold before we can prepare to rebuild. We still have a lot to do, and the faster we do it the less money families will have to spend, since mold contamination is likely not covered by insurance.
